The 24 meg broadband service was first launched in parts of London where the LLU operator had first installed its kit in BT exchanges. The service is now available accross many parts of the UK, visit the website to see if your exchange is now enenabled.

When Be first trialled the service in 2005 it gave reports that its first user has experienced an average speed of 18.5 meg.

In a press statement Be boss Dana Pressman declared that the service was "simply better value than any other broadband service from any other provider".

Be costs from £14 p/m for the lite package to £24 a month unlimited. Learn more about prices and regional availability on Be's web site BeThere.co.uk.

News: Laptop Mobile Broadband

Now sweeping the UK: Laptop Mobile Broadband internet:

Laptop mobile broadband connections on the move. Vodafone, 3 and T Mobile laptop broadband.

Be's 24 meg download speeds are presently the fastest in the UK and almost triple the speed of its nearest competitors.

This has been achieved by using ADSL2+ technology that doubles the download bandwidth together with what is known as LLU (Local Loop Unbundling), Be's service represents a serious leading role in the UK broadband market. Be has been deploying its own network in the UK utilising the Local Loop Unbundling (LLU) EU directive. This allows independent operators to lease and access incumbent's (British Telecom in the case of the UK market) last mile access infrastructure.

Boris Ivanovic the co-founder of Be has once before broken the broadband speed record. In April 2001, he purchased Sweden's fledgling ISP Bostream and launched 26 meg broadband - growing its customer base dramatically from 2,000 to 100,000, and from a $1m to $55m revenue, in just three years. These kind of results don't happen without a great product behind them. BeThere.co.uk...

"The deregulation of the UK broadband market makes this a very exciting time for the UK and Be is here to make the most of it, offering customers the full capability of ADSL2+ from launch," said Boris. "There is no reason to drag out the increase in speed and launch in steps of 1 meg or 2 meg when the capability is there to offer the maximum speeds available - which is what Be is all about."

Be is the first operator in the UK to use Alcatel's latest generation DSLAM (the Alcatel 7302 Intelligent Services Access Manager), as well as aggregation and routing equipment which will give Be the ability to offer the latest products and services that will change the face of broadband in the UK.

Be 24 meg broadband providers has the benefit of building a completely new network based on the latest technologies, allowing it to provide a higher quality product than anyone else in the UK. The company is able to deliver its dramatic speed increase at a remarkably low cost due to Ethernet backhauling and aggregation. It is also able to provide a better service than most, through the use of a highly customisable network infrastructure.

"Alcatel's innovation in research and development and our work with the standardization bodies gives Be bethere broadband 24 meg access to the most powerful broadband technology," said Michel Rahier, in charge of Alcatel's fixed communications activities. "Be has a very exciting proposition for the UK market and has promising plans for their evolution towards a user-centric triple play service offering." BeThere.co.uk...
